

Whether you are already a valued client or are just getting to know us, it is important that you understand the types of account services available to you from Stifel, Nicolaus & Company, Incorporated.² Stifel is a broker-dealer and an investment adviser registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”).

Brokerage and advisory services and fees differ. It is important that you understand the differences, which are summarized below. We encourage you to seek additional information. Free and simple tools are available to research firms and financial professionals at Investor.gov/CRS, which also provides educational materials about broker-dealers, investment advisers, and investing.

To help you get more information about our services, you will find “Conversation Starters” in each section below that you should ask our financial professionals, in addition to any other questions you wish to ask.

► What investment services and advice can you provide me?

We offer both brokerage and investment advisory services to retail investors.³

Our brokerage services include buying and selling securities, such as stocks, bonds, mutual funds, options, or other investment products.

- From time to time or upon your request, we may recommend that you buy, sell, or hold particular investments, or present an overall investment strategy for you to consider.
- Though we are here to help, you take the lead in a brokerage relationship.
- Unless we state otherwise in writing, we will not make any investment decisions for you and it remains your responsibility to monitor your brokerage account and the performance of your investments.
- When we make a recommendation for your brokerage account (including a recommendation to open a brokerage account or transfer assets from another account to a brokerage account), we are acting in our capacity as a broker-dealer.
- We do not have any account minimums to open a brokerage account (but certain investment products and programs may be subject to certain minimums).

² As used in this document, Stifel, Nicolaus & Company, Incorporated is referred to as “Stifel,” “we,” “our,” or “us.”

³ “Retail investor” is a natural person, or the legal representative of a natural person, who receives or seeks to receive services primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. You are not a retail investor if you use our services primarily for purposes other than personal, family, or household purposes.

Our advisory services include advice on buying, selling, and holding investments, as well as developing and choosing investment strategies.

- We offer “discretionary” advisory programs (where we or a separate investment manager buy and sell investments without asking you in advance for so long as you are enrolled in the program) and “non-discretionary” advisory programs (where we provide you with recommendations, but you make the ultimate decision whether to follow them).
- We monitor your advisory program accounts periodically and will provide performance reports pursuant to any agreements with you.
- When we provide you with advisory services (including a recommendation to open an advisory account or transfer assets to an advisory account), we are acting in our capacity as an investment adviser.
- You must meet certain investment minimums to open and maintain an advisory account. Current account minimums and descriptions for each program are described at www.stifel.com/disclosures/investment-advisory-services/program-disclosures.
- Not all of our representatives are licensed to offer advisory services. If your Stifel representative cannot offer advisory services, he or she can refer you to another representative who can.

For more detailed information about the products and services we offer, please see www.stifel.com/relationshipguide, www.stifel.com/disclosures/investment-advisory-services/program-disclosures, and www.stifel.com/disclosures.

Whether you invest with us through our brokerage or advisory services, we do not limit our platform to particular asset classes, proprietary investments, or to investments that result in our receipt of third-party compensation. However, certain investment categories are limited to those for which we receive third-party compensation or proprietary products. Many of the investments we sell, including in particular, mutual funds, variable annuities, alternative investments, and cash sweep options, are ones for which we receive third-party compensation.

CONVERSATION STARTERS:

- Given my financial situation – Should I choose an investment advisory service? Should I choose a brokerage service? Should I choose both types of services? Why or why not?
- How will you choose investments to recommend to me?
- What is your relevant experience, including your licenses, education, and other qualifications? What do these qualifications mean?

► What fees will I pay?

In brokerage, you will pay Stifel a “commission” or other “transaction-based” fee for each transaction that is executed.

- Some investments may include additional compensation to us in the form of an upfront fee (commonly called a “load”) and/or a continuing fee that is charged as long as you hold the investment (commonly called a “trail”).
- When we sell a security to you out of our inventory or buy a security from you to place into our inventory, we are acting in a “principal” capacity and we mark up the price you pay or mark down the price you receive, which benefits us.
- Because we are compensated for each investment transaction in your brokerage account, we have an incentive to encourage you to trade more frequently and in greater amounts.
- We also charge additional fees, such as custodial, account maintenance, transfer, and administrative service fees.
- For a list of our fees and to understand the specific fees you may pay, please refer to www.stifel.com/feeschedule.

In advisory, instead of transaction-based fees, you will typically pay Stifel an “asset-based” fee at the beginning of each quarter.

- Asset-based fees are calculated as a percentage of the assets (including cash) in your advisory account.
- This fee can vary based on the type of investments selected. For example, an equity-based portfolio will have different advisory fees when compared to a fixed income portfolio.
- The more assets you have in an advisory account, including cash, the more you will pay to us in fees. We therefore have an incentive to recommend that you increase the assets in your account. Note, however, that we also offer an advisory program with a transaction-based fee structure (instead of an asset-based fee); however, the investments available through this program are significantly restricted.
- Unless we agree otherwise, our advisory fees will automatically be deducted from your account and will therefore reduce the value of your account.
- For some advisory accounts (known as wrap fee programs), the asset-based fee includes most transaction costs and custody services, and as a result, the fees are typically higher in these types of advisory accounts as compared to advisory accounts where these transaction costs and custody services are not included. In these types of advisory accounts, the fee does not include transaction fees for investments purchased or sold outside of the specific advisory program in which you are invested, including for transactions effected through broker-dealers other than Stifel. If you choose to invest in advisory accounts that are not part of a program where the asset-based fee includes most transaction costs and custody services, you will pay a transaction fee whenever an investment is purchased or sold and you will also pay custodian fees.

CONVERSATION STARTERS:

- Help me understand how these fees and costs might affect my investments. If I give you $10,000 to invest, how much will go to fees and costs, and how much will be invested for me?

In both brokerage and advisory accounts, certain investments, for example mutual funds and variable annuities, impose additional fees that will reduce the value of your investment over time, or surrender charges if you sell the investment before you hold it for a specified time period. These fees are disclosed in the investment's prospectus or other offering document that will be provided to you at or around the time of your investment.

Additionally, fees we receive from third parties in connection with certain products available in brokerage and advisory accounts, including, for example, structured products, unit investment trusts, and alternative investments, may be higher than those for other investment products. These higher fees may create an incentive for us to recommend higher cost products to you.

You will pay fees and costs whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs reduce the amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying. For additional information, please see www.stifel.com/relationshipguide, www.stifel.com/disclosures/investment-advisory-services/program-disclosures, and www.stifel.com/disclosures.

▶ What are your legal obligations to me when providing recommendations as my broker-dealer or when acting as my investment adviser? How else does your firm make money, and what conflicts of interest do you have?

When we provide you with a recommendation as your broker-dealer or act as your investment adviser, we have to act in your best interest and not put our interest ahead of yours. At the same time, the way we make money creates some conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the recommendations and investment advice we provide you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means.

Examples of Ways We Make Money and Conflicts of Interest

Proprietary Products: We earn greater fees, compensation, and other benefits if you invest in a product that we or our affiliates advise, manage, sponsor, underwrite, or otherwise provide services to, such as mutual funds, exchange traded funds, unit investment trusts, private funds (such as hedge funds and private equity funds), structured products, separately managed accounts, and cash sweep or similar products. We have an incentive to offer or recommend these products because of the compensation we and our affiliates receive.

Third-Party Payments: We receive payments from third-party product sponsors and managers (or their affiliates) when we recommend or sell certain products. We have an incentive to recommend or to invest in products of third parties that pay us these fees over other products by third parties that do not pay us these fees or those that pay us less.

Revenue Sharing: Certain investment managers and sponsors (or their affiliates) share with us the revenue they earn from you when you invest in certain of their investment products (primarily mutual funds and variable annuities). We have an incentive to recommend or invest your assets in these products or with these sponsors and fund managers over others that share less or no revenue with us.

Principal Trading: We can buy investments from you, and sell investments to you, from our own accounts. Because we earn compensation (such as commissions, markups, and markdowns) and can receive other benefits in principal transactions, we have an incentive to trade securities that we hold in our own accounts with you on a principal basis.

Bank Sweep Program: Our cash sweep programs create a conflict of interest for us because we have an incentive for you to maintain and direct otherwise uninvested cash in your account to deposits of our affiliated banks, which they can use to generate additional revenue. We also receive revenue for sending your cash deposits to third-party banks that participate in our sweep programs. This creates an incentive for us to recommend or direct investments that result in cash being invested through our sweep programs. For additional information, please see www.stifel.com/disclosures/sweep-choices/sweep-choices-disclosure.

Buying Investments on Margin: If your account has been approved for margin privileges, you may choose to borrow money from us to pay for a portion of the price of securities that you purchase. We have an incentive to recommend that you purchase securities on margin because we charge you interest on the amount of money you borrow from us, and loans permit you to purchase additional investments, increasing our commissions and transaction-based compensation.

CONVERSATION STARTERS:

- How might your conflicts of interest affect me, and how will you address them?

▶ How do your financial professionals make money?

Our Financial Advisors are compensated based upon a percentage of advisory fees and commissions and other transaction-based fees that Stifel receives. As a general rule, a Financial Advisor's total cash compensation increases as the revenue he or she generates increases, and this creates an incentive for your Financial Advisor to recommend transactions, products, and services that generate higher revenue over those that generate lower revenue in order to increase his or her compensation from us. Equity awards from our parent company, Stifel Financial Corp., are a standard component of our Financial Advisors' compensation.

Some Financial Advisors are eligible for special incentive compensation and other benefits based on the amount of client assets in our custody and the total revenue generated by accounts they cover. These incentives and benefits can be in the form of, for example, recruitment and/or retention-based compensation and employee loans and annual Stifel recognition programs that confer a variety of benefits, conferences (e.g., for education, networking, training, and personal and professional development), and other forms of noncash compensation that generally increase in value as the revenue your Financial Advisor generates increases.

These benefits create an incentive for a Financial Advisor to recommend certain transactions, products, and services over others in order to obtain these benefits.

Financial Advisors also receive non-cash compensation and other benefits from companies that provide investment products on our platform. Such non-cash compensation includes invitations to attend conferences or educational seminars sponsored by product sponsors and their affiliates, payment of related travel, lodging, and food expenses, and occasional gifts, meals, tickets or other entertainment, or sponsorship support of educational or training events (which include educational events Financial Advisors arrange for clients and prospects). These benefits can create a conflict of interest to recommend one product over another.
